The intervention of the state administration in providing legal protection and certainty for social welfare insurance is very important. However, there are still problems occurring in society, including acts of discrimination against accessing social needs, causing social inequality. The goal of this research is to determine how the government’s responsibility in implementing social welfare is to provide legal protection and certainty to the community in the concept of a welfare state from the standpoint of state administrative law and how Arrangements for Social Welfare Policy Based on Government Regulation of the Republic of Indonesia Number 39 of 2012 Concerning Implementation of Social Welfare. This research method is normative-juridical. The results of this study show that the responsibility and authority of the government in implementing social welfare and carrying out the duties of executive power must be based on the will of the state, which is based on statutory regulations established by the legislature. The policies regulated in the Government Regulation of the Republic of Indonesia Number 39 of 2012 concerning the Implementation of Social Welfare are rehabilitation policies, social security policies, social empowerment policies, social protection policies, infrastructure standard policies, community participation policies, registration procedures policies, and policies for institutions that organize social welfare.
I. Introduction

The emergence of the concept of a welfare state proposes the involvement of the state in the economic sector related to the distribution of people's income and social welfare, from the time humans are born until they die (from the cradle to the grave). In practice, the welfare state requires a responsive government role to manage and organize the economy so that people receive social welfare services of a high standard. In the reform of the welfare state, the state is obliged to create an optimal degree of social welfare for its citizens by improving the quality of public services and being adaptive to fluctuating social and economic changes.\(^1\) State interference in activities in the field of social welfare and social protection is the task of regulating (regeling) and managing (bestuur) the government, especially through economic regulation and the formation of strong social norms. Sri Redjeki Hartono believes that state interference in economic activities is one of the three important principles required in the framework of fostering legal ideals based on national law principles. That state interference in economic activities in general remains within the limits of the balance of common interests of all parties and in the context of maintaining the balance of interests of all parties in society, protecting the interests of producers and consumers, occasionally protecting the interests of the state and the public interest against corporate or personal interests, and furthering economic activation. This target encourages the occurrence of various irregularities and even fraud that can be detrimental to certain parties.\(^2\)

This means that state interference in social welfare has a specific purpose in the state's strategy for fulfilling people's welfare as an effort to achieve the ideal condition of Indonesia adhering to a welfare state following the legal ideals it adheres to.\(^3\) The role of government is the actualization of state sovereignty in achieving the goal of regulating (reguleren) and administering (bestuur), which is controlled by basic norms and values, in influencing relations between states and their citizens to achieve the common goal mandated by the Constitution of creating and realizing social welfare for the entire society.\(^4\) Indonesia is often referred to as a country that embodies the idea of a welfare state.

This is because in the preamble to the 1945 Constitution of the Republic of Indonesia (1945 Constitution of the Republic of Indonesia), one of the goals of the state expresses the idea of a welfare state. In order to realize a welfare state that aspires to social welfare, a certain kind of tool is needed to make it happen, namely administrative law. In a modern rule of law or welfare state, the government’s expanded role necessitates the adoption of a State Administrative Law (HAN), which aims to enable state administration to carry out its functions on the one hand while also protecting citizens from the attitude of acts of state administration, so that there is a limitation of power in the state on the attitude of state administration, which is very decisive for the implementation of state welfare. According to Lemaire, the task of state administration in the welfare state is Bestuurzorg. It is the responsibility and function of the government to organize public welfare.

Based on the foregoing, if in a welfare state, it is necessary to have legal protection and certainty not only for the people but also for the state administration in carrying out its duties, then state administrative law is an important element in the welfare state as the basis for achieving social welfare in the community. According to Goodin, without the intervention of the state administration, it is easy to be exploited without any mercy at all. Furthermore, according to Sri Redjeki Hartono, state intervention is necessary to maintain a balance between the interests of all parties in society (government, private sector, and civil society) while protecting the interests of the state and the public interest against corporate or personal interests.

According to Friedmann, in his book The Rule of Law and The Welfare State, the function of the welfare state is as a protector, provider, regulator, entrepreneur, and arbitrator. The state is given the mandate to carry out its obligations to fulfill the rights of its citizens.\textsuperscript{10} From a broad perspective, the welfare state can be described as government intervention through public policies, including housing policies, labour regulations, tax laws, and environmental policies aimed at the welfare of society.\textsuperscript{11}

It is necessary to pay \textit{Atensi} to the problems mentioned above to ensure legal protection and certainty that social welfare is a right for every citizen. As mandated by the 1945 Constitution of the Republic of Indonesia, the state has the responsibility to protect the entire Indonesian nation and promote public welfare in realizing social justice, a decent and dignified life, and fulfilling the rights to the basic needs of citizens for the sake of achieving social welfare in a planned, directed, and sustainable manner for all Indonesian people.\textsuperscript{12}

\section*{II. Methodology}

The research method used in this research is qualitative. The researcher used a normative juridical approach as the major data and an empirical juridical approach which uses interviews as supporting data. The data obtained from this study uses both primary and secondary literature as well as other supporting documents sourced from other literature such as websites, books, and interviews. Then, it is analysed and described to find out what is the problem in this research.

\section*{III. Result And Discussion}

\textbf{The Government's Responsibility in the Implementation of Social Welfare that Provides Legal Protection and Certainty to the Community in the Concept of a Welfare State from the perspective of State Administration Law}

The 1945 Constitution of the Republic of Indonesia mandates that the state must protect the entire Indonesian nation and promote public welfare within the framework of realizing social justice for all Indonesians. To realize a decent and dignified life, as well as to fulfil citizens’ basic needs to achieve social welfare, the state organizes social welfare services and development in a planned, directed, and sustainable manner. Based on the foregoing, the state should facilitate the full fulfilment of the rights of every citizen. Indonesia, as a country with the concept of a modern legal state (welfare state), attaches the function of advancing public welfare so that the administration of government must play an active role in the field of socio-economic life of the community to realize the function of law in public services for the social welfare of society.

The government's responsibility in implementing social welfare, based on Article 25 of Law Number 11 of 2009 concerning Social Welfare, includes a. formulating policies and programs for the implementation of social welfare; b. providing access to the implementation of social welfare; c. carrying out social rehabilitation, social security, social empowerment, and social protection according to the provisions of laws and regulations; d. providing social assistance as a stimulant to people who organize social welfare; e. encouraging and facilitating the public and the business world in implementing social responsibility; f) increasing institutional capacity and human resources in the field of social welfare; g) establishing service standards, registration and accreditation, and certification of social welfare services; h) administering social impact analyses and audits of development policies and activities; i) organizing social welfare education and research; j) carrying out guidance and supervision as well as monitoring and evaluation of the implementation of social welfare; k) developing a network and coordination across actors in the implementation of social welfare at the national and international levels; l) maintaining the heroes' cemetery and national hero's graves; m) preserving the values of heroism, pioneering, and social solidarity; and n) allocating a budget for the implementation of social welfare.

Based on Article 29 of Law Number 11 of 2009 concerning Social Welfare, ther responsibilities of regency or city governments in the implementation of social welfare include:

a) allocating a budget for the implementation of social welfare in the regional income and expenditure budget;

b) carrying out the implementation of social welfare in the area or local, including assistance assignments; and

c) providing social assistance as a stimulant to people who organize social welfare.

The authority of the regency or city government in the implementation of social welfare, according to Article 30, includes:

a) the determination of policies for the implementation of social welfare in national and provincial development policies in the field of social welfare;
b) the coordination of the implementation of social welfare programs in the region;
c) granting permits and supervising the collection of donations and the distribution of social assistance following their authority;
d) maintaining the heroes' graveyard; and
e) preserving the values of heroism, pioneering, and social solidarity.

The responsibility and authority of the government in implementing social welfare is the action of the government and regional governments in carrying out the duties of executive power based on the will of the state, which is based on statutory regulations stipulated by the legislature.13 According to Tatiek Sri Djatmika, every use of responsibility and authority, regardless of its form, whether in the framework of regulation, supervision, or the determination of sanctions by government agencies is always accompanied by responsibility. This is a requirement because the concept of administrative law on the granting of authority is complemented by a review and because mistakes in the use of authority always go to court, thus guaranteeing legal protection.14

Arrangement of Social Welfare Policy Based on Government Regulation of the Republic of Indonesia Number 39 of 2012 Concerning the Implementation of Social Welfare

In the implementation of the policy of implementing social welfare, the government, which has the task of regulating and managing various government affairs that are operationally based on the authority regulated in statutory regulations, is generally bound so those who are bound by regulations cannot do anything other than follow them. In the implementation of state administration tasks, the government issues many policies that are outlined in various forms, such as beleidslijnen,15 essentially a product of state administrative actions aimed at "naar buiten gebracht schriftelijk beleid" namely putting out a written policy.16

14 Ibid,
15 Bentuk peraturan kebijakan, seperti beleidslijnen (garis garis kebijakan), het beleid (kebijakan), voorschriften (peraturan-peraturan), richtlijnen (pedoman-pedoman), regelingen (petunjuk-petunjuk), circulaires (surat edaran), resoluties (resolusi-resolusi), annschrijvingen (instruksi-instruksi), beleidsnota (nota kebijakan), reglemen (peraturan-peraturan menteri), beschikking (keputusan-keputusan)
Policy regulations only function as part of the operational implementation of government tasks; therefore, they cannot change or deviate from statutory regulations. These regulations are a kind of shadow law of the statute or law (psudo-wetgeving or spigelsrecht).\textsuperscript{17} The Commissie Wetgevingsvraagstukken develops policy regulations as a general rule for the exercise of government authority over citizens (as well as other governments). It is determined based on its power by the authorized government agency or hierarchically higher government agency.\textsuperscript{18}

According to several opinions of legal experts, the binding force of policy regulations is in disagreement. According to Bagir Manan, policy regulations, which are not statutory regulations, are not directly legally binding but contain legal relevance. Meanwhile, according to Indroharto, the policy regulations for the community create an indirect connection. In addition, Hamid S. Attamimi stated that policy regulations are binding in general because those affected by them cannot do anything else but follow them. Meanwhile, Marcus Lukman argues that the binding power of intra-legal and contra-legal policy regulations, whose formation is based on the freedom of intra-legal considerations, becomes an integral part of the hierarchy of laws and regulations.\textsuperscript{19}

For guaranteed protection and legal certainty in the implementation of social welfare, it is necessary to have concrete government policies that are used as guidelines in the development of social welfare, especially in the implementation of social welfare, so that it is expected to be carried out professionally following statutory provisions to realize social welfare for the Indonesian people. In Law Number 11 of 2009 concerning Social Welfare, in Article 8, Article 11, Article 13, Article 18, Article 35 paragraph (3), Article 45, and Article 50, it is necessary to stipulate a government regulation concerning the implementation of social welfare. Based on these articles, the government makes a policy regarding policy guidelines for the implementation of social welfare through the Government Regulation of the Republic of Indonesia number 39 of 2012 concerning the Implementation of Social Welfare. The purpose of this policy is to work in a directed, integrated, and sustainable manner that is carried out by the government, local government, and community. These policies include:

1. Rehabilitation Policy

\textsuperscript{17} Ibid.
\textsuperscript{19} Ibid.
The right to life is a right that cannot be reduced or revoked under any conditions or for any reason (non-derogable). The state has endeavoured to fulfil its obligation to protect the right to life. As stated in the 1945 Constitution of the Republic of Indonesia in Article 28F and Law Number 39 of 1999 concerning Human Rights in Article 14.\textsuperscript{20} The public has the right to be informed about all public policies that will affect their lives and future. Therefore, the state is obligated to provide information and consult with the public in every process of making rehabilitation and reconstruction policies.\textsuperscript{21}

Conditions that require special protection include 1. people with physical disabilities; 2. people with mental disabilities; 3. prostitutes; 4. the homeless; 5. beggars; 6. Former patients with chronic diseases; 7. ex-convicts; 8. former drug addicts and ex-psychotics; 9. psychotropic users with dependency syndrome; 10. people with human immunodeficiency; 11. Trafficking victims; 12. abandoned children; and 13. Children with special needs. To fulfil the special protection needs mentioned above and to overcome them, it is necessary to follow legal developments and community developments in organizational and management arrangements and optimize social rehabilitation services in the form of programs that are more holistic, systematic, and standardized to achieve individual, family, group, and/or society goals. The government, through the Minister of Social Affairs, establishes a policy regarding social rehabilitation assistance, namely Regulation of the Minister of Social Affairs of the Republic of Indonesia Number 7 of 2022 concerning Amendments to Regulation of the Minister of Social Affairs Number 7 of 2021 concerning Social Rehabilitation Assistance. Social rehabilitation assistance, called Atensi, is a social rehabilitation service that uses family, community, and/or residential-based approaches. This is realized through activities such as support for fulfilment the needs of a decent life, social care and/or child care, family support, physical therapy, psychosocial therapy, mental-spiritual therapy, vocational training, entrepreneurship coaching, social assistance and assistance, and accessibility support.

The social rehabilitation program includes both indirect and direct services.

a) Indirect Service Program, through a. Increasing social campaigns by preventing publication, outreach, education, and expanding information on social rehabilitation in all sectors of society; b. providing competency-based technical guidance for social rehabilitation managers and assistance; c. policy reflection; d. supervision, monitoring, evaluation, reporting, formulating general handbook and operational guidelines; e. coordination fulfilments; and f. social advocacy.

b) Direct Service Program, implemented through social rehabilitation assistance or Atensi. The targets of the social rehabilitation program include children, the elderly, people with disabilities, and victims of disasters and emergencies. In addition to the program's objectives, the goals of the social rehabilitation program are also given to other social welfare service providers. Atensi is carried out based on family, community, and/or residency. The targets include individuals, families, groups, and/or communities. The criteria for targeting Atensi are poverty, neglect, disability, remoteness, social disability, deviant behaviour, disaster victims, and/or victims of acts of violence, exploitation, and discrimination. Atensi is implemented in the form of support for fulfilling the needs of a decent life, social care and/or child care, family support, physical therapy, psychosocial therapy, mental-spiritual therapy, vocational training, entrepreneurship coaching, social assistance and assistance, and accessibility support. Provision of Atensi services using the case management method. This is a systematic step to organize and perform services to address complex protection and/or welfare issues related to the need for Social Welfare Services in an appropriate, systematic, and timely manner through direct support and referrals according to service objectives. The case management process is supervised by social workers. In an emergency, Atensi services can be provided with case responses.

2. Social Security Policy
The development of social welfare in Indonesia refers to the concept of a welfare state. Article 28H paragraph (3) of the 1945 Constitution of the Republic of Indonesia states that "everyone has the right to social security that enables his full development as a dignified human being." Then, Article 34 Paragraph (2) states that "the state develops a social security system for all people and empowers people who are weak and unable to follow human dignity. Social security is a form of social protection that aims to provide guarantees for the fulfilment of the basic needs of a decent life for each participant and/or their family members. Based on Article 18 of Law Number 40 of 2004, which has been amended by the Job Creation Law, there are several types of social security programs organized by the Social Security Administering Body, which include:

a. Health insurance
   Health insurance is held with the aim of guaranteeing that participants receive health care benefits and protection to fulfill their basic health needs. 3. Social Empowerment Policy

Social empowerment services are aimed directly at individuals, groups, and communities so they can act independently and place the community as a competent actor or subject as well as an important agent that can influence change. It can increase the role both institutionally and individually. Because empowerment is a collaborative process, social workers and the community must work together as partners. The process of empowerment is dynamic, synergistic, constantly changing, and evolutionary. However, problems always have various solutions.

4. Social Protection Policy

Social protection is an integral aspect of the process of reducing poverty and reducing inequality within a country. The social protection policy is guaranteed by the 1945 Constitution of the Republic of Indonesia, which states that the government must protect the entire nation and all of its homeland, promote public welfare, and educate the people of the nation. In Article 34 of the 1945 Constitution of the Republic of Indonesia, the state also mandates that the poor and neglected children are cared for by the state, and the state is obliged to develop a system of protection and social security nationally.

The national social security system is a state program that aims to assure social protection and welfare for all people. Everyone has the right to social security to be able to fulfil the basic needs of a decent life and increase their dignity toward the realization of a prosperous, impartial, and prosperous Indonesian society. To provide comprehensive social security, the state develops a national social security system for all Indonesians. To realize this goal, the national social security system needs to establish a legal entity based on the principles of cooperation, non-profit, openness, prudence, accountability, portability, mandatory participation, trust funds, and the results of managing social security funds entirely for program development and the significance of participants.

The form of providing guarantees is organized by BPJS, namely Health BPJS and Employment BPJS. Health BPJS organizes health insurance programs, while Employment BPJS organizes work accident insurance, old age insurance, pension security, and death insurance.

BPJS health participation means that every person, apart from employers, workers, and recipients of contribution assistance, who meets the requirements for participation in the social security program must register himself and his family members as participants with BPJS under the social security program he is participating in.

LKS with a legal entity is a social organization or social association engaged in the implementation of social welfare in the form of a foundation or other form that is declared a legal entity. Foreign LKS is a social organization or social association founded according to the legal provisions of the country where the social organization or social association was founded and has received permission from the government of the Republic of Indonesia to administer social administration in Indonesia.

The position of LKS at provincial and regency/city levels is autonomous and independent. LKS has a role in preventing the occurrence of social problems, providing social services to people with social welfare problems, and holding family welfare consultations. In administering social activity, it has a function as a government partner in district or city regional government. The scope of LKS activities covers the national, provincial, and district/city levels. Meanwhile, the scope of the typology is grouped based on characteristics, including type D/Embryo, type C/Grows, type B/Develops, and type A/Independent. Each of them has criteria:

a. LKS type D/Embryo has the following criteria:
   1) Have not fulfilled institutional and service standards;
   2) Still need assistance to fulfil the minimum standards;
   3) Get a score below 40%.

b. LKS type C/Growth has the following criteria:
   1) has fulfilled some of the institutional and service standards;
   2) Still need assistance for development;
   3) Get a score between 40% to 60%.

c. LKS type B/Developing has the following criteria:
   1) The majority of the institutional and service standards have been fulfilled;

IV. CONCLUSION

The responsibility and authority of the government in the implementation of social welfare is the action of the government and regional governments in carrying out the duties of executive power based on the will of the state, which is based on statutory regulations stipulated by the legislature. Every use of responsibility and authority, regardless of its form, whether in the framework of regulation, supervision, or the determination of sanctions by government agencies or organs, is always accompanied by responsibility. This is a must because the concept of administrative law granting authority is completed by review, and errors in the use of authority always go to court, thereby guaranteeing legal protection.

In Law Number 11 of 2009 concerning Social Welfare, in Article 8, Article 11, Article 13, Article 18, Article 35 paragraph (3), Article 45, and Article 50, it is necessary to stipulate a government regulation concerning the implementation of social welfare. Based on these articles, the government makes a policy regarding policy guidelines for the implementation of social welfare through Government Regulation No. 39 of 2012 of the Republic of Indonesia concerning the Implementation of Social Welfare. The purpose of this policy is to be directed, integrated, and sustainable, carried out by the government, the local government, and the community. These policies include rehabilitation policies, social security policies, social empowerment policies, social protection policies, infrastructure standard policies, community participation policies, and registration procedure policies for institutions that administer social welfare.
